SNELL ORDERS COURT NOTES PRESENTED

A North Sacramento court reporter, who served in Nevada county superior court last summer in the damage suit of Engle vs. Clark, has been given a month to untangle the shorthand notes he took during the trial so the case can be appealed to the district court of appeal

In a jury trial held July 8, 1948, Engle was awarded damages amounting to $27,500 for injuries sustained when he was allegedly hit by a truck belonging to Clark on Highway 40 near Truckee.

So far, so good for the court reporter, who was substituting for the regular reporter, Miles D. Coughlin

But, attorneys for the defendant appealed the case to the higher court on the grounds that Clark didn't get a fair trial, that there was misconduct on the part of the jury, and that excessive damages were awarded Engle

Such an action requires a typed copy of the reporter's transcript of the proceedings. Asked for a transcript to complete the file for the appeal, the reporter. Fred Rund, said he could not make out the shorthand notes he took of the testimony in the trial.

The request for the reporter's transcript was first made last October by J. A. Montgomery, attorney for Clark

Ordered to appear last week before Judge James Shell to show cause why he should not prepare a transcript, he firmly maintained it would be impossible to restore the proceedings of the trial from his shortland report.

Judge Snell gave Rund 30 days to transcribe his shorthand into typewritten copy and present it to the court in person, pointing out that the court and counsel would decide upon the accuracy of the record

The break does not affect the Cascade, Snow Mountain or D-S canals, but does interfere with delivery of water to Lake Spaulding hydro-electric operations of the P.G.&E.

Telephonic communication has been cut off with Bowman House because of the slide.

Varney reported water was flowing in the Cascade canal at 2 a.m., Friday. An irrigation district crew worked until 5 p.m., Thursday and then was relieved by a crew from the Empire and Idaho-Maryland mines.

The Nevada City schools were open only two days last week, Wednesday and Thursday. Only about 25 per cent of the high school pupils and less than 50 per cent of the elementary school students attended. Busses were unable to bring pupils which contributed to the poor attendance.

Warden Hiscox Says Deer in No Danger

Although many deer are now seen in the lower country in vicinity of Nevada City and Grass Valley, Game Warden Earl Hiscox states they are in no danger.

He says the deer are coming down from the higher elevations to escape the deeper snows. The deer are expected to get sufficient food off brush browsing to sustain them for the winter. Hiscox states he is supplying salt blocks for the animals.

He recalls several years ago 3000 deer were trapped by a snow storm in French meadows and authorities hauled several tons of hay into them. In the spring most of the hay was still there. The deer refused to eat it.

Hiscox reports quail are suffering most from the storms. With the soil frozen and snow covered, many of them have starved to death.

MLINARICH SUFFERS SEVERE FROSTBITE

John Mlinarich, Nevada City real estate broker, was taken to Jones memorial hospital in Grass Valley Saturday afternoon with a severe case of frostbite in both feet, sustained while working in ice-clogged Banner mountain ditch with a volunteer N.I D. crew which has been working to clear the Twin Cities water channels since early last week.

Mlinarich will be required to remain in the hospital for several days until the extent of the damage to his feet can be definitely determined.

The real estate dealer, who volunteered to help in the ditch-clearing operations Thursday morning, learned that his feet were frozen after he had worked 24 hours straight from Friday morning until early Saturday morning.

He said he first noticed his feet being excessively cold early Friday night. Later he noticed they were warming up. Thinking the latter was a result of the added walking and wearing heavy rubber boots, he ignored the danger signal.

Returning to his home Saturday morning, he went to bed When he woke up, his feet were swollen and discolored He was rushed to the hospital where his feet were placed in ice packs to "thaw out."

OUR POLICY

This issue of the Nugget appears with new publishers at the helm. Robert H. Wray and Donald W. Wray are our names. We will employ our brother, Kenneth W. Wray, as editor and manager.

It will be our aim to publish the best weekly newspaper humanly possible. We realize, as newcomers to this community, we may make errors in the spelling of names or publish erroneous information because of an ignorance of the background of community history. We will do our best to prevent such an occurrence but in its event, we ask your kind forbearance. We ask you to inform us should we mispell your name, or publish an error. You will not hurt our feelings—rather you will be doing us a highly appreciated favor.

We ask your help and cooperation in gathering news and advertising. We want to publish your club news, church items, personal items of your visitors and visiting, and all articles of interest to Nevada City and Nevada county. We will also welcome letters to the editor.

We are independent in politics, religion and personal freedom. We have no axe to grind nor will we permit ourselves to be used as cat's paws to handle other's "chestnuts." News stories will not be "colored". Publicity will be identified as such.

It is our intention and hope to fill out the years of our lives here. We want to enter the life of the community and some day be accepted as Nevadans.

From experience we know and realize the problems that beset merchants and businessmen of non-metropolitan areas. We are not high-pressure salesmen of newspaper space. It will be our aim to aid in the promotion of community betterment projects, and to help merchants and businessmen publicize their merchandise and services to the public.

We reserve the right to edit and refuse advertising copy we deem objectionable, but we do not expect to exercise that right except on very rare occasions. We will be guided by the "Index Expurgatorius" of the New York Times, which bans fraudulent, misleading, personal attacks, and indecent advertising, so-called personals—matrimonial, fortune telling and such.

Newspaper advertising, for the retailer, has four specific aims:

1. To sell to the public the idea that his store is a good place in which to trade.
2. To sell the specified advertised items included in the copy.
3. By increasing traffic in his store, to sell other non-advertised items.
4. Through the accomplishment of these aims, to increase the net profit of his business.

We will do our best to produce the kind of a newspaper that will be welcomed and read in the homes of this area. By so doing we will accomplish the four-fold aims of retailers' advertising, and continue the successful publication of this newspaper.

Our advertising and commercial printing rates will be on display in a conspicuous place in our office.

A major portion of our business will be commercial or job printing. We have an enviable reputation as quality printers and intend to retain that reputation. We also established the record of never having refused a piece of commercial printing because of difficulty of production.

We welcome your business and the opportunity to serve you.

Just Wonderin'

I wonder if in forty-nine,
A hundred years ago today,
A single prophet could foretell
Of strange new paths we tread today.
And as the pioneers of old
Plied shovel, drills, and pick
Did any one of them foresee and pan,
Across the century's long span?

This year we are turning back to the forty-nine of old and recalling the gold rush revealed our California to the world and began the upbuilding of her hill communities together with the population of vales and great inland valleys. We read many vagaries of the modern imagination, produced by sensational romanticists and if we are not careful, erroneous ideas of the past may find lodgement in our minds.

An intense interest in the mother lode areas of California, is being awakened in young minds and old and there are sources of information which give authentic data and others which spring from the tyypewriters of those who write for the goddess of pure fiction. Let's discriminate.

A book recently published under the direction of the state division of mines and titled, "The Mother Lode Country", traces the geological history of this glamorous district, and presents true and well authenticated glimpses of past history. It traces the mother lode from Mariposa to its northern limits and if one is interested in geology he will find in this volume a treat and a well spring of information.

In following the colorful trails of our pioneers, we often neglect the beautiful inland cities which grew and prospered as the direct result of the gold rush. Sacramento was the gateway to the northern mines, but there are many who do not know Sacramento. In this famous city there are reminders of the state's romantic past with which many of us are quite unfamiliar. Local residents and the casual tourist would do well to visit the Crocker art gallery, capitol park, Sutter's fort and other places of interest and become versed in the historic and romantic wealth which abounds. Sacramento is still the gateway to the northland and from it, one may visit Coloma, Placerville, Auburn, Grass Valley and Nevada City.

Of equal importance to those who would follow olden trails, is the beautiful city of Stockton, for it was the gateway to the southern mines and the realm made famous by Bret Harte, Mark Twain. Joaquin Miller and other colorful writers of the time.

As is the case wtih Sacramento, too many of us are not well acquainted with the history of Stockton and have not as yet realized its importance not only as a gateway, but as a flourishing modern city, with a future which any progressive city might well envy.

This is indeed a year of memories, and, in turning to the past and becoming more familiar with the history of our state, we shall find many moments when cold wars, taxes, high cost of living and other bogies of our present, fade from our minds. Also, we shall feel a new interest in the mother lode and to realize the vast tribute it has paid to the advancement and growth of the state and the nation.

We are the forty-niners now, so let us dedicate some part of our thought to those forty-niners of old, who gave us the kingdom we're holding today.

American Bankers Association Urges Free Market for Gold

By ROBERT W. BACHELOR
Director of Research Council
American Bankers Association

From 1930 through 1941 gold mining expanded and profits to gold miners generally increased. Wholesale prices were falling and wages were going down thus reducing mining costs and enabling operators to work marginal grades of ore that were unprofitable when costs were higher. The other stimulant to gold production was the rising price of gold in terms of national currencies.

This 12-year bull market in gold was accumulated by a 12-year bear market in public sentiment about gold. Gold became a relic of the dark ages. Lord Keynes, whose brilliantly insolvent economics was widely accepted in Washington, advised the U.S. to spend. At a time when we had idle men and idle industrial capacity. the importation of $17 billion of gold contributed substantially to stability and when war finally came to our country we had the universally-sought-after means of payment.

There has come a reversal in public opinion concerning the worth of gold. Gold is becoming more widely appreciated. During the war years it was found that a great deal can be accomplished by a discriminating use of gold, especially in the purchased of urgently-needed raw materials.

Not so long ago our basic money was gold or silver, or gold or silver certificates which were really warehouse receipts for these metals in storage. We had a commodity money. Beginning in 1913, we have gradually shifted to a debt money. Bank deposits, representing credit, are the basis of our monetary system. Bank deposits, created when a mine operator sells gold to the mint. when a bank buys a U.S. government security, or when a merchant or a manufacturer borrows at his bank, expand the money supply. Today we have deposits and currency of $168 billions, while our monetary gold stock is only $23½ billions. About $14 out of every $100 of our money supply is represented by gold and $86 by debt.

Money serves as a medium of exchange and as a store of value. As an instrument of long-time storage, paper money may break down. Gold buried in the back yard is much more sure of having value years hence. Gold ought to be readily available for industrial and non-monetary uses as well as for monetary purposes. There should be a market where individuals and business could obtain it easily and without red tape. Legislation will not change the centuries-old thinking and habits of people all over the world who regard gold as the most desirable store of value.

The present plight of gold-mining companies could be helped by a decline in prices of materials and labor, a better relationship between production costs and the selling price of gold, or a higher selling price.

The war affected every currency in the world in one way or another. Non-belligerents found themselves with an abundance of U.S. dollars British pound sterling and gold but short of civilian goods. So we have inflations due to too much hard money as well as to much soft money. These inflations are a factor in making unlikely any substantial fall in wages and wholesale prices. There is little prospect that the prewar price level of 1939-1940 will return, but producers might be able to lower costs a little more through engineering research.

A better relationship between production costs and the price of gold would help gold mining. Some persons advocate a direct devaluation of the dollar. brought about by fixing some new price of gold. In a country with an inflation equalled only a few times in our history, this would be foolhardy. It would add to the money supply, and we do not need a larger money supply now. The time and place for a direct and immediate devaluation is a country with a depression well under way.

It would be undesirable to adjust by law the ratio between cost and the price of gold. The method selected must be acceptable to a majority in congress, in the committees on banking and currency, and to the president of the United States, and his treasury advisors. Under what circumstances could producers receive more dollars for each ounce of gold marketed?

A higher price of gold must not be in the form of an expense to the treasury. A return to gold redemption of the currency now would be detrimental to the financial structure of this country. Moreover, it would not increase the price paid by the treasury for gold, nor would it halt inflation. If the U.S. treasury were obliged to redeem its currency in gold this requirement would seriously interfere with its ability to manage the public debt.

Gold production can increase by offering a higher price to producers, without expense to the treasury, without undesirable inflationary or deflationary consequences, and without any compromise in the ability of the treasury to manage that public debt, by restoring the unrestricted right of individuals and business to own and trade in, and to import and export gold in any form.

A free gold market would further international understanding immeasurably.

Since 1940, and especially since the end of fighting in late 1945, the U. S. has had a virtual world monopoly on industrial products. The terms of trade have been in our favor because a purchaser cannot get prompt delivery from other suppliers. A free gold market would help to ease the onerous terms of trade that most of our customers suffer. Over a long period, a free market would set the appropriate evaluation price for gold.

The number of dollars that might be offered for an ounce of gold on the open market is a matter of conjecture. Gold is worth what people, either individually or collectively, are willing to pay for it. Some writers seem to believe that an ounce of gold can be exchanged for about the same market basket of commodities now as before the war. Press accounts indicate that there is a small traffic in gold dust and small nuggets in the western states, at about $50 or $51 an ounce. Reports from foreign countries usually quote sales of gold have been between $40 and $80 a fine ounce. In most countries the indicated prices have declined during the past two years. My own opinion is, that under present circumstance, an unrestricted gold market would value gold at between $45 and $50 a fine ounce—California Mining Journal

That The People May Know

In time of stress and the shock of sorrow it is oftimes natural that a confusion of thoughts regarding firm names and personnel dominate actual intentions of those confronted with decision. Because such instances have been called to our attention, because we are sincerely desirous that the people may know and because it is our desire that the requests of those deciding last earthly ministrations be fulfilled, we believe it well to emphasize that

Alvah Hooper Is Associated With But One Mortuary

AND THAT FIRM IS THE

Myers Grass Valley Mortuary

We are proud that our firm boasts such a member as Alvah Hooper, Coroner of Nevada County and mortician and funeral director of highest repute. Mr. Hooper has been associated with the Myers Grass Valley Mortuary for several months. Regardless of similarity of name —MR. HOOPER HAS NO CONNECTION OR INTEREST IN ANY OTHER FUNERAL HOME.

Myers Grass Valley Mortuary has a jealous pride in the reputation it has built in the community of Grass Valley. POWER PLANT that uses its Head!

THIS is the husky thrill-producer you find filling the bonnet of any 1949 Buick.

Look it over and you'll observe, among other things, that it is a valve-in-head straight-eight.

In simple language, this means that years ago Buick engineers lifted the valves from the side of the cylinder and put them on top—with some immediate advantages.

Such an engine "breathes" better. Gets a full, even charge on every intake—exhausts spent gases more easily—enjoys extra power, life and ginger.

And in such engines, compression ratios are relatively easy to establish. To step them up, the head is merely brought closer to the piston—no extra problems are presented getting fuel in and exhaust out.

Thus Buick power can—and has—kept pace with progress in fuels. Compression ratios suit gasolines actually available—and there's no waiting for tomorrow's gasolines to get full performance.

There are other things to notice about this engine.

It's a Fireball power plant—uses a special and exclusive type of piston that gets more good out of each fuel charge.

And it speaks with soft, new quiet. Self-setting valve lifters automatically keep valves properly seated, ending tappet noises for good.

With gasolines getting better, the swing to valve-in-head design will undoubtedly grow stronger. But that is what Buick has had all along—a power plant that uses its head to give extra lift and thrill.

That's enough reason to see your Buick dealer now, with or without a car to trade, to get your order in.

LOCAL CAGE TEAMS LOSE TO INDIANS

Nevada City's Yellowjackets lost to Marysville's basketball quintet Tuesday night, 51-44, after leading the Indian cagers through more than three quarters of play.

The local team took a halftime lead, 28-19. Howe, Ellis, and Bertino were finding the hoop with regularity for the Jackets.

Bob Bonner's Bees were outplayed through most of their preliminary contest, winding up on the short end of a 48-27 score.

The two teams will travel to Sacramento Friday where they play the Christian Brothers A and B teams.

Placer high school's basketball teams defeated Nevada City's Yellowjackets here last Friday evening, wtih the varsity score, 42-29, and the Bees ending up 44-24.

Two Auburn players. Alvari and Yakota, members of last year's all-star team of the Sierra Football league, led the Hillmen in a fast offense, that coupled with an air-tight defense, gave the Yellowjackets few scoring opportunities. Placer high school led 21-9 at half time.

Dick Howe and Duane Coleman led the Nevada City offense, and Joe Bertino was outstanding as a defensive player.

In the opener, the locals played Placer high to a standstill during the first half, and left the floor lagging by 18-17. The local Bees fell apart during the second half and garnered only seven points to Placer's 16.

OPPOSITE VETERANS' MEMORIAL BUILDING

WASHINGTON NOTES

By Congressman Clair Engle

Three bills of interest to mining are getting active attention. The measure introduced by Senator McCarran and me calling for reimbursement to the gold miners for losses due to W.P.B. order L-208, which closed the gold mines, has been favorably reported by a subcommittee on judiciary in the senate. As previously pointed out in this column, Senator McCarren is the chairman of the judiciary committee in the senate and therefore in a key position to give active aid to this measure.

The measure introduced by Senator Murray and me to permit miners of strategic and critical minerals and metals, who through no fault of their own were forced to discontinue production and suffer financial loss during the war, to file claims will this week or early next week get favorable action from a subcommittee of the house committee onjudiciary. Except in unusual circumstances, favorable action by a subcommittee assures favorable action by the full committee and it is anticipated that both this and the bill for the relief of the gold miners will therefore get favorable action from the full committees in each instance.

Additionally. hearings have been set for this month before the subcommittee on mines and mining of the house, of which I am chairman, on the measure for incentive payments for exploration, production and stockpiling of critical and strategic minerals and metals. We are in hopes of getting the industry together on a bill. although miners have in the past been notoriously divided on the subject. Further, it is hoped that the Administration will present a favorable attitude at the hearings.

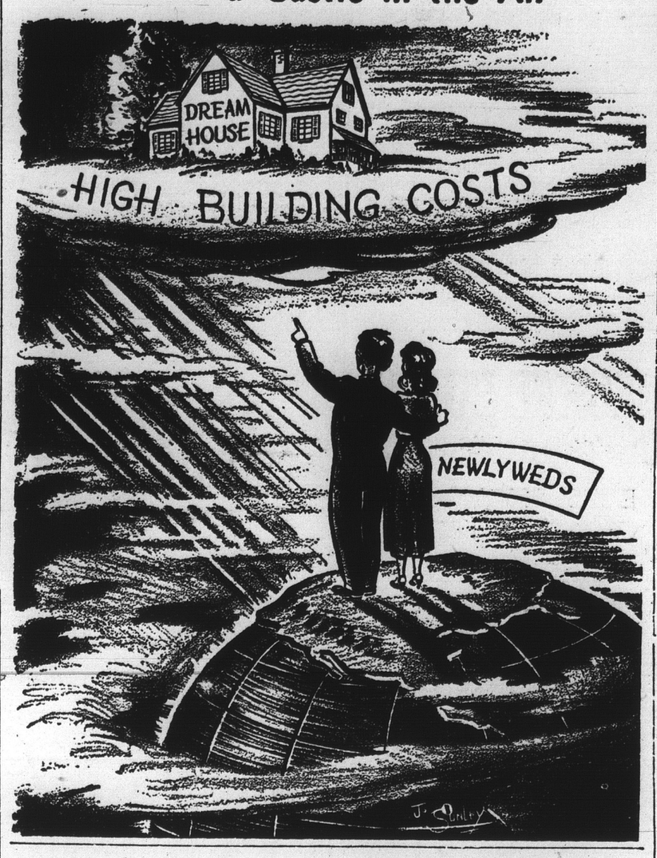
Hearings on the Folsom dam legislation have been set for March 1. This is the legislation enlarging the present authorization, which is only for flood control, to make it a million acre foot, multiple purpose flood control, irrigation and power project. and providing for the Sly park project in El Dorado county as well as study for adequate canals for irrigation in El Dorado and Placer counties. Extensive hearings should not be necessary if the concurrence of the state water authorities can be secured on the current bill. The measure as introduced by Congressmen Welch, Johnson, Anderson and me embodies all of the recommendations made by both the president of the U.S. in a special message to congress, as well as those requested by Governor Warren last spring.

Congressional committees are reluctant to authorize projects which do not have the approval of state water authorities. Therefore, it is essential to get an early reaction from the state. I have urgently requested this both from Governor Warren and the water resources board. If it is forthcoming I anticipate the bill can be got out of committee without the attendance of large delegations from California at a good deal of expense and inconvenience.

The row over the proposed park embracing the big trees in Tuolumne county is still in progress. I have filed a protest with the forest service and the secretary of agriculture, not because I oppose the establishment of the park, but because I oppose the procedure which is now proposed. Under the proposed procedure, the forest service would exchange stumpage for the area on which these big trees are located. That would mean that the local counties in the Stanislaus national forest will lose the 25 per cent stumpage payment which will normally come to them if this stumpage is sold and cut in the usual manner. It amounts to requiring these four small counties to put up 25 per cent of the purchase price. Furthermore, these counties lose the additional 10 per cent from the stumpage payments, which goes into roads and trails in the national forests and also the tax payments on the lands which would go into the proposed park.

I believe it is proper to save these trees but that acquisition should be made by purchase by the state. It is bad enough for Tuolumne county, which is 75 per cent federally owned. to lose an additional 2,000 or 3,000 acres of taxable property and it is manifestly inequitable to expect the counties in the Stanislaus national forest to put up 25 per cent of the purchase price by losing the stumpage payments. This could conceivably amount to as much as $500,000.

Still a Castle in the Air



500 Veterans Transferred To State Education Help

Arrangements for a "painless" transition from federal to state educational assistance in midterm for approximately 500 veterans enrolled at California colleges and universities this spring were announced by the state department of veterans affairs.

Students affected are those who are eligible for state aid, but who have been taking advantage first of the more liberal subsistence allowances provided by the federal GI bill of rights. In the 500 cases where their federal entitlement would have run out during the first half of a quarter or semester, these veterans were faced with having to complete the term without financial help

ROUGH AND READY PIONEER SUCCUMBS

Funeral services were held Monday at 2 p m. in the Hooper and Weaver mortuary for Mrs Louise Jane Fippin, 71. of Rough and Ready, who died Feb. 11 in a Grass Valley hospital. Interment was in the Rough and Ready cemetery.

Mrs Fippin was a native of Cornwall, England. She had lived in Rough and Ready for 65 years.

Deceased was the wife of John Fippin and the mother of Mrs Norene Seley, Grass Valley; Albert Fippin and Elmer Fippin, Sacramento, and Sidney Fippin, Rough and Ready.

Better Give Her The Air

Mrs. Blank was explaining the routine to the new cook.

"We lunch precisely at 1 on Wednesday," she said, "as on that day we always go for a spin in the car at 2."

"Very good, mum." replied the cook, "but I shall have to leave the washing up till we gets back again."

Resonant Tummies

Dorothy had heard a missionary relate over the radio some of his experiences in Africa. Telling her father about it afterward she said: "He told us that the poor heathen were often hungry and when they beat on their tumtums it could be heard for miles."

WILDLIFE WEATHERS SEVERE WINTER

Wildlife in northern California has generally weathered the severe storms of the past month with only a few exceptions, F. P. Cronemiller, regional chief of wildlife management for the U.S. forest service, on the basis of a poll of forest rangers.

Deer are generally in good shape, although some are wintering in fairly deep snow. In places they have congregated in brush thickets. In western Trinity county there is deep and sometimes crusted snow on winter range, and there has been some loss of small deer.

"It is usually the latter part of the winter that is tough on wildlife," Cronemiller reported. "Then the deer have used up most of their fat; the forage has little strength, and walking through mud and snow requires considerable energy. The weather of March and early April will tell whether or not there will be severe deer losses this winter."

Bird life has suffered much loss of doves, quail, and song birds in the foothills of the Sacramento valley. In northeastern California, December snows forced quail to the roadsides for grit. and the hunter take was quite heavy until the sportsmen's pleas through the newspapers made quail hunting under those conditions "a disgraceful avocation."

The small number of ducks and geese wintering in that area were in precarious plight with very little open water and their food supplies exhausted. All the birds were reported very thin and starving in this area, some being unable to fly. Sportsmen, game wardens, and forest rangers made strenuous efforts to get feed to the hungry birds.

"A continuation of storms could practically eliminate quail on the east side of the Sierra. where in recent years fine coveys have built up," Cronemiller declared.

BREAD

While the price of wheat dropped about 30 per cent between January and October, 1948, the retail price of bread has failed to respond. As a matter of fact, in the same period, the retail price of bread rose 0.7 per cent, according to the Agriculture Department.

4 more Californians who find Bank of America the financial ally of small business

Four Marketeers find satisfaction in the day's receipts of Amity Market, San Francisco

Elroy Mittelholtz, Eric Nordquist, Paul Gresh and Bert Quist might be called the Four Marketeers. In the few years since the war these young men with their own capital, augmented by a Bank of America loan, have established a market in San Francisco which is today "busting its seams." The friendly banker who helped them along their way was the manager of their neighborhood branch of Bank of America.

Tahoe National Forest Timber Yield $215,000

Tahoe National Forest cut timber, Christmas trees, and other timber products during 1948 amounting to a total value of $215,000. according to R. E. Dasmann, assistant supervisor.

Dasmann explained Tahoe forest cut 27.3 million board feet of timber for lumber, fence posts, shingles and other products with a value of $182,070.. The timber was cut by 58 different operators. All sales made for timber worth $500 or more were advertised and sold on a competitive bidding basis. The forest official further explained that the timber and timber products were all cut and sold on a sustained yield basis; a system which assures the communities within the Tahoe area of a continuing and permanent source of income from the public timber lands.

Christmas trees and greens sold on public lands yielded a revenue of $32,455. Christmas trees were cut by 23 different operators, mostly from the inaccessible areas of the high fir timber belt.

In addition, under special cooperative agreements, the Tahoe forest sold 4,892 Christmas trees on private land, valued at $4,576.00. This work was done to assist landowners to get better management ofthe irtimber producing lands. All Christmas trees cut by the forest were removed on a thinning basis. to improve the growing condition of the forest.

Free use permits were given local forest residents for 67,000 board feet of timber. Most of the timber was used for fire wood, shingles, and similar products.

In line with the policy of the forest to plant all areas burned over where the soil will support a stand of timber, a total of 155 acres were planted in 1948. This work was done at a cost of $4,776 on the area burned in 1947 by the Bloody Run fire. 118.000 pine seedlings were planted. This land once supported a very fine forest and still retains the deep rich soil capable of growing another such orop.

During the year 695 acres of young timber stands were pruned to improve the quality of sawlogs in the fastest growing trees.

According to law, 25 per cent of all receipts from the Tahoe national forest will be returned to the counties of Nevada, Yuba, Placer, and Sierra.

In addition, another 10 per cent is returned to the forest to be used for road and trail work to develop the area. These returns are based on the total forest receipts, which include revenue from sales of timber and timber products, fees from grazing permits, summer home and resort permits, and other uses. Returns to be made to the above named counties for 1948 will amount to close to $50,000. This compares with $29,000 returned to these counties in 1947. As more areas are opened up and new timber sales are made, this money will continue to increase.

Dasmann pointed out that it is important to realize that these funds are returned to the county in lieu of taxes. The general public often does not konw that public lands in the national forest return funds to the counties in place of taxes that would have been collected were the land in private ownership.

PIONEER DIES IN COUNTY

Mrs. Elizabeth E. Tarr, 78, known to thousands of Nevada county residents as "Aunt Bess" was laid to rest Monday afternoon in Pine Grove cemetery Nevada City. Mrs. Tarr died at her home at 130 South Church street, Grass Valley, Thursday morning, Feb. 10.

Funeral services were held Monday, 2 p.m., at the Myers Grass Valley mortuary, with the Rev. W. W. Turner, pastor of the Congregational church, Grass Valley, conducting. Officers and members of the Nevada Rebekah lodge of Nevada City took part in the services.

Musical numbers for the servjces were played by Mrs Rose Johns.

Pallbearers were Walter Bolander, James Sampson, Joseph Stenger, Angelo Harris, Luke Williams and Fred Williford.

Although Mrs. Tarr had been under medical care for several years, she had appeared to be in her customary health and the sudden death was unexpected.

Mrs. Tarr was born Elizabeth Hocking at Virginia City, Nevada, on Aug. 3, 1870. during the height of the Comstock Lode silver boom. Nine years later she came to Nevada City with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Hocking.

She was a resident of Nevada City until the death of her first husband, Preston Fremont Simmonds, Nevada City attorney, in 1909. She was married to Simmonds on April 7, 1895.

A few months after her husband's death she moved to Grass Valley where she remained until her death.

She was united in marriage with Ernest W. Tarr June 12, 1911.

Mrs. Tarr is survived by a brother, Ernest H. Hocking, Grass Valley; two nieces, Mrs. Gerald McCue, San Anselmo, and Mrs. Hazel Walmsley. Grass Valley; a nephew, Rogert E. Hocking, Mrs. Ernest Hocking and Mrs. Delia Torpie, Sacramento, are sisters-in-law.

Driver Education For High Schools

Rapid increase in the use by California high schools of dual control cars for training students in automobile driving is forecast by the California State Automobile association as an outgrowth of the new state law making driver education classroom courses mandatory.

Only classroom instruction is compulsory under the new law now in effect, the advanced behind-the-wheel training being set on an optional basis. The automobile association anticipates that teaching of the theory of safe driving will rapidly create a demand for the follow-up of practical on-the-road driving instruction, stemming not only from its popularity with students but from the realization by parents of the accident-prevention value of driver training.

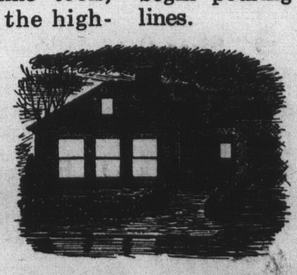
High-voltage trouble shooters

When winter storms hurl broken trees across power lines, trained P. G. and E. "trouble shooters" speed into action to restore your electricity. First step is to set up road blocks around the danger zone. Then, armed with "hot line" tools, the crewmen unscramble the high-voltage wires which may still be charged with electricity.

Next they cut out any sections that must be replaced, repair them fast and flash the word to the Dispatcher to begin pouring power back into the lines.



"SOS" is radioed or otherwise rushed to every "trouble man" in the area ...and the closest are assigned to the mission. If they need extra help, they call for reinforcements.

Lights go on again fast because P. G. and E. trouble shooters stand a 24-hour vigil. Their job is to keep power flowing to homes, farms and factories.

for the record

12,000 miles of new power lines have been strung since V-J Day.

This is just part of P. G. and E.'s postwar power-building program...

...that already has added half a million new horsepower of generating capacity.

Work never stops on our power-building program

Gold Digger's Trail

Charles Scott Haley

In four or five days we were ready to start, and our tents and camp outfit, as well as the drill, were landed alongside the express steamer which was to be our home for ten days or so. We were bound for a small town called Buena Vista, on the main river, from whence we would take canoe up the Miel River, which it was our first job to prospect. The Miel was a sluggish tributary of the Magdalena which headed up in the central cordillera which separates the Cauca Valley from the Magdalena. The Cauca has long been a producer of gold, and this was the first time that anyone had tested the opposite side of the range.

After supervising the loading of our own stuff, I noticed a little French Jesuit priest who seemed to be having difficulty in getting his stuff on the boat, as he evidently spoke no Spanish, and the cargadores who were loading all passenger equipment could not understand him.

I asked him if I could be of assistance to him, and he replied in a torrent of grateful French that I could. I soon had him straightened out and his luggage on board, and was very pleased to find that his cabin was right between Mr. Knox's and my own. As Knox spoke French very well, although he knew little Spanish, we became well acquainted on the voyage, and both of us enjoyed him very much. I have always made it a point to cultivate priests of this order when travelling, because I have found them to be not only among the best educated men that I have ever met, but also the most broad minded, and tolerant of all other faiths.

That afternoon we moved away from the dock and turned our bows southward up river. The steamers used at that time were sternwheel paddle boats of narrow beam, with small cabins on the upper deck in which every bed was covered with a "tolda" of mosquito netting. The forward part of the deck widened into a 'comedor" or dining room.

The lower deck was used mostly for storing cordwood, cargo, and for the kitchen and slaughtering arrangements. It was well, if you wished to appreciate your meals, not to visit the kitchen, because you were apt to see a calf breathing his last alongside of the evening's dessert pudding, and the sanitary conditions were not such as to appeal to the fastidious in any of the cooking.

The boilers were wood fired, and every day a stop had to be made to take on a load of cordwood. This was contracted for at various points by the steamship company, and always seemed to be available just as we were on the point of running out of the previous day's supply.

Alongside the stamer, on one or both sides, it was not uncommon to fasten barges loaded with extra cattle or freight. The lowing and smell of the beasts during hot weather did not make life even on the upper decks any too pleasant.

There was little to do but snooze, eat and talk during the daytime, and to crowd to the railing whenever we stopped at a native village and marvel at the size of the protruding tummies of the native small fry. Between the ages of one and six, the diet of half-cooked plantains and fish seems to bloat the little bodies to the point of deformity, but after these ages, their ventral organs appear to become normal and resume their proper places.
